Notes for DOROTHY ANNE WONNACOTT:

William Turpin was a carpenter, he secured work in Salt Lake City, so he and Dorothy both moved to the USA. It has been suggested they immigrated earlier and they returned to Plymouth in the summer of 1911 to visit their respective parents.

Their journey to America was due to have been on the "New York" but their passage was switched to the "Titanic" as a result of the coal strike.

They travelled on second class tickets costing £21. They were both lost in the sinking. Dorothy's body was not recovered from the sea.
